

Somehow they understand

Leo Sidran, Leonor Watling

She's seen it all before
He's used up every line
Neither's expecting more
Than a glass of decent wine

But this isn't like he thought
This isn't what she planned
They both pretend they don't
But deep down they understand

Oh it's right beyond the corner of her smile
Right behind the glimmer in his eye
It might be in the time they take to say goodnight

He wasn't gonna stay
She had another plan
They've gotten swept away
That's all they understand

Oh it's right beyond the corner of her smile
Right behind the glimmer in his eye
It might be in the time they take to say goodnight

Oh buried in the surface of the skin
Carried in a shadow deep within
They understand the truth about their own desires

He'll blame the Chardonnay
She'll thank the groovy band and looking back one day
They'll try to understand

When there's nothing left to say
Somehow they'll understand